THE PALACE

Prince Petcharath Ratanavongsa (1890-1959) holds a special place in Lao History as the only viceroy of the Kingdom of Laos and had a tenure as prime minister from 1942 to 1945. His tenure as Prime Minister of Laos was during World War 2 both under French protectorate & Japanese occupation.

Post the Japanese occupation, Prince Petcharath was in favor of an independent Laos which was to the contrary to the King's sentiments which was in favor of the French Protectorate. In 1946, he became the leader of the Lao resistance movement that sought to suppress the country's return under the tutelage of French colonials in favor of a free Laos. The difference in opinion led Prince Petcharath to leave the country for Thailand and spend eleven years in exile.

He later passed away at his birthplace of Luang Prabang in 1959. To Lao people, Prince Phetsarath represented both continuity with the pre-colonial past and the hope of a new, post colonial future, he was both a traditionalist, by culture and by his affinity with the Lao people among whom he was so popular, and a modernist, determined to forge a new Lao unity where a history of kingdoms and principalities had existed before.

To this day, Laotians still hang Prince Pethsarath's picture in their homes. His popularity to the Lao people is in regard to its countries pre-colonial culture and independence; he was both a traditionalist with an affinity for Lao culture and its people but also a visionary; his life and legacy is indelibly imprinted into modern history of Laos.

LAOS

Laos is a Southeast Asian country traversed by the Mekong River and known for mountainous terrain, French colonial architecture, hill tribe settlements and Buddhist monasteries. Vientiane, the capital, is the site of the That Luang monument, where a reliquary reportedly houses the Buddha's breastbone, plus the Patuxai war memorial and Talat Sao (Morning Market), a complex jammed with food, clothes and craft stalls.

LUANG PRABANG

Luang Prabang, the ancient capital of Luang Prabang Province in northern Laos, lies in a valley at the confluence of the Mekong and Nam Khan rivers. Inhabited for thousands of years, it was the royal capital of the country until 1975. It's known for its many Buddhist temples, including the gilded Wat Xieng Thong, dating to the 16th century, and Wat Mai, once the residence of the head of Laotian Buddhism.
